John Jablonski is a partner of the firm and a recognized authority in the areas of technology, transportation, and environmental law. He is currently the firm's Information Security and Privacy Officer, the partner in charge of the firm's IT systems, and co-chair of the Cyber Risk and Social Media Practice Group. While John's primary focus is counseling clients on data security, data privacy, and information management issues, he has significant experience in matters involving transportation, environmental, and product liability. He has 20 years of litigation experience and has tried numerous cases to verdict in state and federal courts, including successfully briefing and arguing appeals.

Technology: John is a recognized authority in the protection and preservation of data. His comprehensive understanding of technology, data systems, and how businesses use technology helps drive innovative solutions for our clients' data security, privacy, protection, management, preservation, and cyber liability problems. John has a rare ability to translate complex technical and legal issues for our clients, effectively manage projects, and facilitate effective communication among multi-disciplinary stake-holders and team members to achieve results.

John was the Program Chair of DRI's first Data Breach and Privacy Law Seminar ("Cyber Security Strategies in a Digital Age"), including presenting on "Developing a Data Security Plan." He is the editor of the firm's 50-State Compendium on Cyber Breach Notification Laws. In addition to handling data breach response and investigations, he is a frequent speaker on data security and data breach response issues. John is a member of the editorial advisory board of Law Technology News and a member of the International Association of Privacy Professionals. In addition, John advises a wide array of technology companies regarding data security agreements, intellectual property protections, software licenses, website use, privacy policy, click-wrap, co-location, data transfer and data storage agreements. John has also prosecuted and defended business-to-business litigation involving website use, software licenses, data transfer and data storage issues.

John is a well-known national authority on e-discovery and litigation hold practices in the United States. He serves as e-discovery counsel to clients as well as trial teams within the firm. John has managed large e-discovery projects and forensic investigations, involving multiple vendors and, at times, nearly 100 contract reviewers.

John also helps clients develop comprehensive Records and Information Management policies and procedures including records retention schedules, litigation hold policies, data privacy, data security, and defensible destruction of data. He is litigation hold counsel for clients of the firm and regularly offers opinions on the scope and defensibility of litigation holds and the defensible destruction of data. John actively participates in ARMA, including contributing to the Information Management Journal, speaking at ARMA events, serving as past President of his local ARMA chapter, and co-authoring the book Seven Steps for Legal Holds of ESI and Other Documents.

Loss Portfolio Analysis: John brings a unique skillset to the area of loss portfolio analysis. For more than 10 years, John has managed complex data analysis projects involving large data sets, including use of various computer analytics tools, keyword searching strategies, technology-assisted review platforms, and individual document review by attorneys who have substantive experience in the claims and jurisdictions being analyzed. John's analysis has been used by clients for their own internal analysis of existing portfolios, auditing claims within a portfolio, and due diligence in support of mergers and acquisitions. John has used loss portfolio analysis to develop alternative fee pricing models for firm clients, including developing and managing targeted programs for early case resolution and other initiatives designed to introduce economic efficiencies and cost certainty to claims resolution.

Transportation:

JOHN J. JABLONSKI | Goldberg Segalla

John is consistently recognized by his peers as an authority in the highly specialized field of railroad law. John is the former Northeast Region Vice President of the National Association of Railroad Trial Counsel (NARTC), a member of its Environmental Law Committee, and Chairman of the NARTC's National E-Discovery Committee and former member of the Technology Committee of the American Short Line & Regional Railroad Association. John represents both short line and Class I railroads in all manner of cases, including property rights, preemption issues, breach of contract, trespasser liability, toxic exposure, environmental, and railroad employee claims.

Environmental Law: John started his legal career defending companies against CERCLA and state superfund cost recovery actions, including responding to investigations and lawsuits conducted by the Environmental Protection Agency and New York State Department of Environmental Conservation. Over the years, John has defended enforcement proceedings and lawsuits related to hazardous waste sites, hazardous waste discharge, contaminated homes and businesses, toxic exposure, asbestos and silica exposure, industrial exposure, chemical spills, hazardous waste spills, and oil spills (including government oil spill fund recovery actions).
