EXPERIENCE

Andrew N. Fluger is an experienced civil litigator who counsels and defends a wide array of corporations in general liability, trucking, and transportation matters. His areas of practice range across the liability spectrum in state and federal courts, including commercial transportation, general liability, premises liability, automobile liability, and construction litigation. Andrew draws on a background handling vertical transportation litigation, representing many prominent and well-known elevator and escalator companies in the greater New York metropolitan area. He has extensive knowledge of all types of elevator technology and systems currently in use in commercial and residential buildings. He also draws on experience representing various corporate entities and health care professionals in civil matters.
