EXPERIENCE

Arianeh Hamzelou maintains a broad civil litigation practice that encompasses premises liability, retail and hospitality claims, transportation matters, and general negligence actions. She has extensive experience managing cases from inception through resolution, including conducting fact investigations, drafting and arguing motions, taking and defending depositions, coordinating expert discovery, and representing clients at mediations and settlement conferences. Arianeh regularly partners with insurers, third-party administrators, and corporate clients to evaluate exposure, develop litigation strategy, and pursue efficient, results-driven outcomes.

Arianeh's practice includes handling high-volume dockets as well as complex, multi-party matters. She is experienced in assessing risk early, identifying key liability and damages issues, and positioning cases for favorable resolution – whether through dispositive motion practice, negotiation, or trial preparation. Her clients value her clear communication, practical judgment, and ability to navigate challenging factual and procedural landscapes.

Before entering private practice, Arianeh served as an assistant prosecutor in the Hudson County Prosecutor's Office, where she gained substantial courtroom experience through motion practice, grand jury presentations, plea negotiations, and bench trials. She also clerked for the Hon. Gary N. Wilcox of the Superior Court of New Jersey, Bergen Vicinage, drafting judicial opinions and orders in criminal matters and appeals.
