ASSOCIATE

EXPERIENCE

Carolyn J. Collins concentrates her practice on counseling insurers, self-insured employers, and third-party administrators in workers' compensation matters. During law school, she gained experience as a law clerk working on criminal defense and family law matters. Carolyn counseled and represented domestic violence victims as a clinical student at the Rutgers Law School Domestic Violence Clinic. She was also a judicial intern for U.S. Magistrate Judge Hon. Matthew Skahill, drafting discovery, memorandums, pre-trial orders and motions, and reviewing case exhibits and briefs for hearings, oral arguments, and conferences.
