EXPERIENCE

Daniel J. Lange represents retailers, hospitality companies, and other businesses in a range of civil litigation matters, including premises liability, general liability, and personal injury claims. Drawing on his experience handling complex commercial disputes, professional liability claims, and tort litigation, Daniel develops practical litigation strategies tailored to his clients' objectives, with an emphasis on assessing risk, managing exposure, and achieving favorable resolutions.

Daniel has experience representing businesses, professionals, and individuals in state and federal courts across New York. His litigation background includes contract disputes, business ownership and governance disputes, breach of fiduciary duty claims, employment-related matters, defamation, and professional liability litigation. He handles matters throughout all stages of litigation, including pleadings, discovery, depositions, dispositive motion practice, court appearances, appeals, and alternative dispute resolution.
