EXPERIENCE

Jesse G. Richheimer represents manufacturers, distributors and various client companies in toxic tort and environmental concerns, addressing a broad spectrum of matters related to environmental regulation and litigation at both the federal and state levels. His experience includes regulatory compliance, transactional support, and permitting strategies for Brownfields redevelopment and wetlands projects in New York and New Jersey.

Additionally, Jesse has developed in-depth knowledge of key environmental statutes and regulations, providing clients with counsel on the Industrial Site Recovery Act (ISRA), Spill Act, Brownfield and Contaminated Site Remediation Act (BCSRA), Site Remediation Reform Act (SRRA), and the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation and Liability Act (CERCLA).

Before entering private practice, Jesse gained valuable experience at both the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and the New York State Department of Environmental Conservation. During this time, he handled diverse environmental enforcement cases and contributed to policy development initiatives. His background includes work on high-profile cases involving air and water quality, hazardous waste, and renewable energy.

In addition to his J.D., Jesse earned an Advanced Environmental Law Certificate at the Elisabeth Haub School of Law at Pace University and holds a B.A. in Environmental Sciences from Emory University.
