Martha P. Brown

PARTNER

EXPERIENCE

Martha Brown represents her clients in employment litigation, employment practice liability insurance (EPLI) issues, and insurance coverage disputes. Her practice covers the full spectrum of employment litigation and counseling, professional liability, and a broad range of first- and third-party coverage disputes. While applying her considerable background litigating in state and federal courts, Martha advises clients regarding the forum that is both appropriate and receptive to their positions. She aptly positions cases for appellate review, securing clients' appellate rights, and presenting their position for determination.

EXPERIENCE HIGHLIGHTS

EPLI Litigation and Employment Counseling

Martha has successfully litigated discrimination, wrongful termination, and retaliation claims in both federal and state courts.

In addition to defending employers and their directors and officers, Martha draws upon her extensive experience in all areas of employment law to advise clients on issues regarding terminations, demotions, reductions in force, and hiring practices. She regularly provides guidance on surveillance of employees, substance abuse by employees, and proper administration of leave of absence policies. Her broad employment law background has also involved assisting clients in drafting employee handbooks, employment policies, employment agreements, and severance agreements.

Insurance Coverage

Martha has handled both first- and third-party insurance coverage matters, including disputes over the extent of commercial general liability (CGL) coverage for construction defect claims, application and coordination of coverages under additional insured endorsements, coverage for successor liability, coverage under directors and officers (D&O) and errors and omissions (E&O) policies, and coverage for wrongful conviction based on subsequent DNA exoneration.
