EXPERIENCE

Noah L. Dennison focuses his practice on counseling and defending New Jersey-based insurers, employers, and third-party administrators in a wide variety of workers' compensation matters involving compensability of claims, temporary disability disputes, and a spectrum of alleged injuries and conditions.

Noah has handled all aspects of pre-trial discovery, including written discovery, expert retention, and fact and expert deposition. He is also experienced in developing litigation strategy and in drafting and arguing both discovery and dispositive motions. His practice involves close, frequent, and detailed communication with clients at every stage of litigation. Noah has also handled complicated medical malpractice and dental malpractice litigation, equipping him with an understanding of medical and scientific concepts and insight into the practice of contemporary medicine, all of which have proven valuable time and again in litigating workers' compensation claims

During law school, Noah gained experience through legal clerkships in areas including insurance subrogation and the defense of municipal government employers against class actions. Before entering private practice, he served as a law clerk for the Hon. Richard J. Geiger in the New Jersey Superior Court. In this role, he composed memoranda of law with ruling recommendations and mediated cases and proposed settlements.

A dedicated runner, Noah has completed nine marathons and fifteen half-marathons. His personal records are 3:28 and 1:34, respectively.
