"PFAS UPDATE: UNREGULATED (MOSTLY), UNCERTAIN, AND UBIQUITOUS," DRI TOXIC TORTS AND ENVIRONMENTAL LAW NEWSLETTER

In June, partner George H. Buermann and associate Oliver E. Twaddell of the firm's Environmental Practice Group published the article, "PFAS Update: Unregulated (Mostly), Uncertain, and Ubiquitous," in Toxic Torts and Environmental Law, the DRI's Toxic Torts and Environmental Law Committee newsletter. Every week there is more news involving the challenges that communities, municipalities, state and federal environmental regulatory bodies, and the environmental community at large face from the class of chemicals known as per-and polyfluoroalkyl substances (PFAS) and their impact on human health and the environment. In DRI's For The Defense June 2018 publication, an in-depth look was taken into the state of PFAS and what the horizon holds for regulation and litigation. This short article will explore a few of the recent key developments.
