Andrew Buchetto, an associate in the firm's Hartford office, represents and defends a wide variety of businesses and individuals in premises liability, automotive, subrogation, property damage, and products liability matters. He is a member of the General Liability, Construction, Trucking, and Management and Professional Liability practice groups. An experienced litigator, Andrew works quickly with clients from the inception of litigation to analyze the legal issues and risks involved and to aggressively prepare a defense for his clients. Andrew has counseled corporate and individual clients through all aspects of litigation, including settlement, arbitration, mediation, and trial.

After earning his bachelor's degree at the University of Massachusetts Amherst, Andrew went on to obtain his law degree from Roger Williams University School of Law. During law school, Andrew gained experience in a wide variety of public and private settings, including as a summer legal associate with Northeast Utilities, as a judicial intern with the Connecticut State's Attorney's Office, and as a student attorney with his school's Immigration Clinic. After graduating, Andrew gained additional experience as a courtroom clerk for judges of the New Haven District Superior Court.
